MIDTOWN MAYDAY

A helicopter crash-landed onto a Seventh Avenue office building on Monday, killing the pilot and causing panic in the area. 2

A helicopter made a crash landing onto the roof of a Midtown Manhattan skyscraper on Monday, killing at least one person and sending a plume of smoke skyward from the top of the building.

The crash occurred shortly before 2 p.m. on a rainy, foggy day at the 750-foot AXA Equitable Center at 787 Seventh Ave. Dozens of emergency vehicles swarmed the busy area, a few blocks north of Times Square.

The person killed was "presumed" to be the pilot, New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said at a news conference. The New York Post identified the pilot as Tim McCormack. No injuries, either to people in the building or on the ground, had been reported, he said.

"Thank God for that," de Blasio said. "This could have been a much worse incident."

The mayor said the cause was unknown but that there was no indication that the crash was an "act of terrorism." It was not clear if the weather was a contributing factor.

The chopper took off from a heliport on Manhattan's East Side and crash-landed on the building 11 minutes later, emergency officials said.

The site is about half a mile from Trump Tower, where President Donald Trump maintains an apartment. The area has been under a temporary flight restriction since his election in November 2016.

Nathan Hutton, who works in information technology for the French bank BNP Paribas on the 29th floor, said the building shook when the helicopter slammed into the roof.

"It felt like you were just standing there, and someone takes their hand and just shoves you," he said. "You felt it through the whole building."

The Federal Aviation Administration said in a statement that the aircraft was an Agusta A109E, a twin-engine, lightweight helicopter. The pilot was the only person aboard, and FAA air traffic controllers did not handle the flight, according to the agency.

> "It felt like you were just standing there, and someone takes their hand and just shoves you. You felt it through the whole building."

The National Transportation Safety Board will investigate the cause of the crash, the FAA said.

Melvin Douglas, 50, who was selling umbrellas on the street, said he heard a "rumble" when the helicopter crash-landed.

"I didn't see it, but I felt it," said Douglas. "Smoke was on top of the building."

A fire that broke out on the roof was quickly brought under control, the fire department said. The building was evacuated after the crash.

Trump called Gov. Andrew Cuomo, who was at the scene soon after the crash, to offer assistance if needed, the governor's office said.

"Phenomenal job by our GREAT First Responders who are currently on the scene," Trump said on Twitter after being briefed on the crash. "The Trump Administration stands ready should you need anything at all."

The AXA Equitable Center was built in 1985 and includes more than 50 floors. A roof helipad is not listed as one of the building's amenities on its website.

In addition to BNP Paribas, the building houses offices for a number of other corporate tenants, including law firms Willkie Farr & Gallagher and Sidley Austin and investment manager New Mountain Capital. Le Bernardin, one of New York City's most celebrated restaurants, is also located in the AXA building. REUTERS

Proposed bill may make New York the first state to decriminalize sex work

The state Senate will take up a bill that dramatically redefines the legal landscape for sex work.

letters@metro.us

New York legislators are pushing to decriminalize sex work in the Empire State.

Lawmakers on Monday filed the first-ever bill that would make it legal to both buy and sell sex under certain circumstances. The bill also modifies laws around facilities that are used as brothels, or places to purchase prostitutes.

"Decriminalizing sex work between consenting adults in New York will protect many of my neighbors — people who have found themselves in limited situations because of employment and housing discrimination," Senate Labor Committee Chair Jessica Ramos said. "We will finally make strides against trafficking by empowering sex workers to report violence against them. Sex work is work and everyone has an inherent right to a safe workplace."

The bill, which legislators drafted with the aid of sex worker rights advocates Decrim NY, would repeal the criminalization of patronizing an adult for prostitution and promoting prostitution in the third and fourth degrees — laws that criminalize sex workers who work together to organize and work with each other for safety.

The definition of advancing prostitution would be amended to protect young people between the ages of 17 and 21 from laws that ban working together; amend multiple real estate and public health laws; and require all genders to be acknowledged instead of using only "he" or "she" pronouns.

GETTY IMAGES

> "Neither young people nor adults should have to trade sex to meet their needs."
> Jessica Raven, member of Decrim NY's steering committee and former sex worker

Another crucial part of the bill repeals loitering for the purposes of prostitution, which advocates say often involves profiling of people of color and trans people. In NYC, about 1,500 people were arrested on prostitution-related charges in 2018, which commonly netted sex workers of color, transgender sex workers, and immigrant sex workers.

"This is not just about decriminalizing workers or the absence of criminal codes. It's about making sure people who work in the sex trades have access to making a living in the sex industry in a way that is not a crime," Audacia Ray, a member of the Decrim NY steering committee, a director at the New York City Anti-Violence Project and a former sex worker, tweeted.

Advocates for sex worker rights in New York announced their intention to fully decriminalize prostitution in the state.

"New York criminalizes adults for trading sex for resources, but falls short in addressing root causes," said Jessica Raven, member of Decrim NY's steering committee and a former sex worker. "Instead, we subject sex workers, and the people who live and work with them, to state violence.

"Neither young people nor adults should have to trade sex to meet their needs, Raven said. "But until safe housing and a living wage are accessible to everyone, many of us will continue to sell sex to survive."

The bill is sponsored by state Sens. Jessica Ramos and Julia Salazar.

New York would be the first state to fully decriminalize sex work in the country if the bill passes.

Other states are also taking on sex worker rights bills. Under Nevada's state laws, prostitution and solicitation are legal in counties with fewer than 400,000 residents.

In Washington, D.C, four district council members backed a revised decriminalization bill introduced last week.

'Central Park 5' tell Oprah of pain and redemption after Netflix series

"It brought back a lot of pain," Antron McCray said.

The five men wrongly convicted of raping a jogger in Central Park in 1989 said on Sunday that a new Netflix series about their case revived the pain from their ordeal but, for some, brought a sense of redemption.

In an interview with Oprah Winfrey, the men who became known as the "Central Park Five" said they were grateful that the four-episode dramatic series, called "When They See Us," humanized them and used their story to spotlight injustice.

"It's bittersweet," said one of the men, Kevin Richardson, as he sat onstage with the others. "Watching this is painful, but it's necessary. It needs to be watched."

The five men — Richardson, Yusef Salaam, Antron McCray, Raymond Santana, and Korey Wise — were 14 to 16 years old at the time of the rape and confessed after lengthy police interrogations. The victim was white and the defendants all black or Hispanic.

Each soon recanted, insisting they had admitted to the crime under coercion from police officers. But they all were convicted and served prison terms of six to 13 years.

Their convictions were overturned, in 2002, after another man confessed to the crime and DNA tests confirmed his guilt. In 2014, they settled a lawsuit against New York City for $41 million.

"It brought back a lot of pain," McCray said of the series. "I thought I was over it."

> "Watching this is painful, but it's necessary. It needs to be watched."
> Kevin Richardson, one of the men

McCray, who broke into tears during the discussion, said he did not feel any sense of redemption and still suffered from the trauma of being falsely accused and imprisoned.

"Even to this day, I'm damaged. I need help. I know it," said McCray, who added that he has rejected his wife's request that he go to therapy. "The system broke a lot of things that can't be fixed."

Asked if he had forgiven his father, who urged him to confess to the crime, McCray said: "I hate him. My life is ruined."

"No, it's not," an audience member shouted.

The interview, part of a Netflix campaign for television's Emmy Awards, was recorded and will premiere on Netflix and on Winfrey's cable channel OWN on Wednesday.

Salaam said he believed the series was helping people to "realize that we didn't have to go through this. This is how the system, despite the wheels of justice, mowed us down."

He said he used to feel like he was walking around with his head down. Now, "I'm proudly raising my head," Salaam said to applause.

Winfrey, an executive producer of the series, said the world had known the men as "a derogatory headline for decades" but now she hoped they would be known as "the exonerated five." REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Executives denounce abortion restrictions in Times ad

Tinder, Warby Parker and Square were among the companies represented in the ad.

Scores of technology, media and fashion executives took out a full-page advertisement in the New York Times on Monday to denounce restricting access to abortion and other reproductive health care.

The advertisement follows a string of company executives in recent weeks who threatened to pull investments in states enacting new laws that limit abortion rights. Nine states, including Alabama, Georgia and Missouri have passed abortion laws this year that all but ban the procedure.

"Restricting access to comprehensive reproductive care, including abortion, threatens the health, independence and economic stability of our employees and customers," reads the New York Times advertisement, signed by company officials. "It impairs our ability to build diverse and inclusive workforce pipelines, recruit top talent across the states, and protect the well-being of all the people who keep our businesses thriving."

Among the signees were Square's Jack Dorsey, designer Rebecca Minkoff, Bloomberg L.P. board member Peter Grauer, Tinder Chief Executive Officer Elie Seidman and Warby Parker founders Neil Blumenthal and Dave Gilboa.

The companies employ a total of more than 108,000 workers, according to the ad.

Walt Disney Co. Chief Executive Bob Iger last month told Reuters it would be "very difficult" to keep filming in Georgia if a law banning abortion went into effect. Netflix Inc. followed, saying it would "rethink" its investment in Georgia if the law goes into effect.

For now, state officials don't appear to be backing down. "We are the party of freedom and opportunity," Georgia Gov. Brian Kemp said at the Georgia GOP convention in Savannah. "We value and protect innocent life — even though that makes C-list celebrities squawk," according to AJC.com. REUTERS

Prayers for Big Papi after former Red Sox great shot in Dominican Republic

Police in the Dominican Republic were investigating on Monday why a man shot and wounded former Boston Red Sox slugger David "Big Papi" Ortiz as he sat in a nightclub late on Sunday, according to police and the team.

The 43-year-old, still beloved in Boston for his role on three World Series-winning teams, was recovering in a hospital in Santo Domingo on Monday from a bullet wound to his back, the Red Sox said. His friend Jhoel Lopez, a television host, was also wounded in the incident, police said in a statement.

The pair of assailants drove up to the club on a motorcycle late Sunday, where one of them appeared to approach on foot and open fire, sparking a panic in which diners fled their tables, according to police and video of the incident posted by local media.

Some at the club then beat one of the suspects before police took him into custody. He was later identified as Eddy Vladimir Feliz Garcia.

Police said they are still searching for the other suspect, who fled on foot. Feliz Garcia had been arrested in 2017 on drug possession charges, police said, adding they had seized the motorcycle used in the attack.

El Nuevo Diario published what it said was security camera footage of the moment the shooting occurred. It showed patrons at the bar suddenly fleeing, leaving toppled chairs behind them.

Ortiz was out of surgery and in stable condition and expected to make a full recovery, his father, Leo Ortiz, told reporters in Santo Domingo, according to CBS.

"Big Papi will be around for a long time," he told reporters.

The surgery lasted about six hours, with doctors removing parts of his intestines, colon and gallbladder, ESPN reported, citing Leo Lopez, a spokesman for Ortiz.

Ortiz remained in the intensive care unit on Monday, but was expected to be flown to Boston later for further treatment, ESPN said.

The Red Sox said they were in contact with the family.

Ortiz was famously protective of Boston during his time with the Red Sox, and won international attention for a defiant speech in the days after the 2013 Boston Marathon bombing in which he exclaimed "this is our f—king city" on national television.

Former Red Sox teammate Pedro Martinez called Ortiz a "strong man." REUTERS

Demand Soars At NYC Medical Clinic For Promising Back Pain Treatment

Can This Medical Technology Possibly Eliminate Or Greatly Reduce Even The Most Severe Back Pain... Almost Instantly?

The Advanced Medical Treatment Every Back & Neck Pain Sufferer Needs To Know - No Matter How Bad The Pain Is Or How Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with two locations in New York City that has made a name for itself by treating the worst cases of back or neck pain.

Here is what every back and neck pain sufferer who has failed to respond to other treatments and does not want surgery should know about one of the best treatment options available today for severe back and neck pain including when, why and where you should consider this treatment to get maximum results.

If you suffer with back, neck or nerve pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for back pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal, short term results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there is very good option to help relieve the pain.

An option that a lot of back and neck pain sufferers may have never heard of before.

Before we get into these treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated the worst cases of back pain. Patients travel from all over to be treated at one of their clinics for all sorts of joint and muscle pain because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover is a REAL medical treatment. Not some miracle cure you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no one treatment that will help every case of back pain. And we cannot guarantee this treatment will work for you. But this treatment has already helped countless back and neck pain sufferers who had given up hope. I bet many just like you.

What is this treatment? It's called...

Radiofrequency Neurotomy

"Radiofrequncy Neurotomy" is often referred to as RF for short.

RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your spine and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to these nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, the Radio Frequency Neurotomy is scheduled and performed for longer term relief.

What Results Can You Expect?

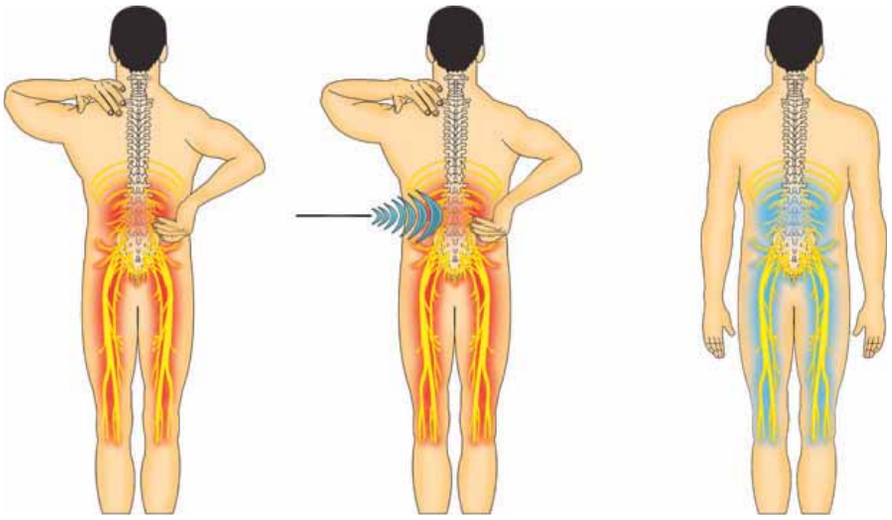
Like all real medical procedures... results vary for individual patients. No good and ethical doctor would guarantee any exact results for any procedure... that's just not how things work and it would be less than honest.

That's being said, it is not uncommon for patients to get complete, if not significant relief of their pain shortly after the treatment.

How Long Do The Results Last?

This procedure "blocks" the nerves pain signals... it does not destroy them. Therefore, the results are safe but not completely permanent. But, many patients get relief for 6 months… 12 months…. 18 months for some and some even longer. The great news is - another procedure can be safely preformed for more relief if necessary.

Advanced Treatment Uses Radio Frequencies To Relieve Serious Neck & Back Pain



Science rescues back & neck pain sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

While we cannot claim this is a complete "permanent cure" but... it can be a god-send for so many who were in constant pain.

Really... what would it be worth it to you could get out of pain for long enough so you could start enjoying your everyday life again?

Would it be worth it to be able to finally get a good nights sleep again?

How about being able to go for a simple walk or just do your basic daily chores without worrying about so much pain?

Is It Safe?

Yes. This procedure has been done countless times and continues to have an excellent safety record. It is minimally invasive and is not surgical.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and physical therapy do not offer good enough results.

RF has also been found effective AFTER back surgery when patient's still feel pain.

The pain after a failed back surgery can be debilitating for some and this procedure may be the only thing that helps give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain And The "X" Factor

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

Mexico eyes Brazil for asylum deal as tariff threat revived

REUTERS

Mike Pompeo said results should be seen within several weeks.

Mexico and the United States may explore additional steps next month to restrict illegal immigration from Central America, with the threat of tariffs hanging over Mexico if it does not do enough to satisfy U.S. demands, officials said on Monday.

Mexican Foreign Minister Marcelo Ebrard said Brazil, Panama and Guatemala may need to be brought in to help if a deal unveiled last week between Washington and Mexico fails to reduce the numbers of U.S.-bound immigrants crossing Mexico.

The deal struck on Friday averted import tariffs on all Mexican goods, which U.S. President Donald Trump had vowed to impose unless Mexico did more to curb migration.

The Trump administration said on Monday it could still apply tariffs if it judged that Mexico had not done enough, with U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo telling reporters it expected to see results within four to six weeks.

The deal cut between the two nations last week means Mexico will expand a program under which migrants applying for asylum in the United States wait out the process in Mexico. Mexico also pledged to reinforce its southern border with Guatemala with 6,000 members of its National Guard militarized police.

A major sticking point in last week's talks was a U.S. demand that Mexico be declared a "safe third country" for asylum seekers, requiring them to seek refuge in Mexico if they passed through the country on the way to the United States.

Mexico rejected that demand, though Ebrard revealed it would go back on the table if Mexico could not stem the flow of migrants heading to the U.S. border.

"If we don't have results on what we're doing [in 45 days], we'll start conversations on what they want, which is that Mexico will be a safe third country," he told Mexican radio.

> "If we don't have results on what we're doing [in 45 days], we'll start conversations on what they want, which is that Mexico will be a safe third country."
> Mexican Foreign Minister Marcelo Ebrard

Such a step would require the Mexican government to consult the Senate on how to proceed, Ebrard said.

Trump said on Monday afternoon Mexico would soon announce an "undisclosed portion" of the deal that would have to be taken up by the Mexican Congress. He did not offer more details.

"They have to get approval, and they will get approval. If they don't get approval, we'll have to think in terms of tariffs or whatever," he told reporters at the White House.

Ebrard said that if Mexico could not contain the migrant flows, other countries might also need to be involved.

Asylum seekers from El Salvador and Honduras first pass through Guatemala when fleeing their homes, while Cubans and Haitians often fly first to Panama before heading to the United States through Mexico. Migrants from African countries regularly fly to Brazil before making the arduous journey north.

Ryan Murphy, Steven Canals and Janet Mock on the bold second season of 'Pose'

The category is: "Vogue."

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Tonight marks the return of one of last year's biggest TV success stories, the beloved FX series "Pose," which depicts the vibrant ball scene of early 1980s New York City. The show was co-created by Steven Canals along with the creative force of Ryan Murphy and Brad Falchuk, and broke serious ground by being the first show on a large network to have significant trans representation both in front of and behind the camera.

The second season will make a time jump and find the characters at the start of a new decade, in 1990, right as Madonna's "Vogue" video is bringing the ball scene to a much larger mainstream audience and the AIDS crisis is ravaging the tight-knit community. The series will also pick up where the first season left off, following the show's main character, Blanca, and her recent HIV diagnosis as she tries to be a good mother to those she takes care of who have been rejected from society and their birth families under her "house."

Ryan Murphy, one of TV's great auteurs of the past 20 years, originally wanted to tell the story of the '80s ball culture after he acquired the rights to do a theatrical retelling of the famous documentary "Paris Is Burning." But when he read the pilot script by Steven Canals, he knew he had to abandon those plans in order to tell this more fictionalized version. That way, they could cast a wider net over what was happening in the community in those years.

"I love the show so much because it's a real story to me," says Murphy. "It's about a beginning, middle and an end. The last season will be in '95-'96, when they develop the antiviral drugs that can help fight off HIV. To me, the show has always been about the demolition of a community that refused to be silenced and stopped. I always found that very moving. The show is very topical because the show is about a group of marginalized people who are saying, 'I have a right to be heard and I have a voice and I belong, too,' and I think that we all drank the Kool-Aid after Obama and said, 'Oh great, we made it!' As you can see, we didn't, and a lot of our rights in this community, people are attempting to remove them. In many ways, this community, the ballroom community, were such pioneers for civil rights. I always tell people, never forget, it was a trans woman who threw the first brick at Stonewall. I don't think a lot of people know that."

Steven Canals had spent years pitching the initial story idea to TV executives until he got the backing from Murphy and Falchuk. Now, the show has been widely accepted by fans and heralded as a triumphant breakthrough by critics. The importance of telling this story with members of the LGBTQ community actually telling it means more given the obstacles being created by our current political landscape.

"Particularly at this moment, when we have an administration that is constantly targetting the LGBTQ community, I think it is critically important for young queer and trans kids to know that they are loved and respected and their lives matter," explains Canals. "I think at least what I'm trying to do with 'Pose' is to create a safe space, a home for folks to go to where they are seen and where they are seeing their experience reflected back in a positive light."

Canals is also proud to have created a show where the majority of the writers and actors are approaching the material from their everyday experiences of being trans, rather than having a cis straight person trying to service the material.

"My feeling was, I just don't buy into the rhetoric [that] there is no LGBTQ talent or, specifically, there's no trans talent out there," explains Canals. "There is, and I'm proud to now be able to use my show as a model to say, 'You're just not looking hard enough.' Clearly, you aren't, because we've got a bunch of folks here!"

> "I think at least what I'm trying to do with 'Pose' is to create a safe space, a home for folks to go to where they are seen and where they are seeing their experience reflected back in a positive light."
> Steven Canals

As the story follows characters like Candy, Blanca and Elektra Abundance as they find space within a spotlight that was never there before, their newfound visibility in mainstream society will be something that they will have to grapple with.

"We all know that visibility is a double-edged sword," explains activist, bestselling author and current writer, director and producer of "Pose" Janet Mock. "On one end you get to be seen, but that being seen makes you that much more vulnerable as a target. But also exposed in a sense that you can go and have bigger opportunities."

Season 2 of "Pose" premieres tonight at 10 p.m. on FX.

‘Pose’ stars MJ Rodriguez and Dominique Jackson on finally being given the spotlight

The critically acclaimed show returns for its second season tonight on FX.

PAT KING

The greatest thing to come out of the groundbreaking and critically acclaimed show “Pose” is that it has shined a light on incredibly talented trans actresses who may never have had the chance to play such prominent roles on television before. As the show’s second season premieres tonight on FX, we got the chance to speak with two of the show’s stars, MJ Rodriguez, who plays Blanca Rodriguez, the show’s emotional center; and Dominique Jackson, who plays the singular Elektra Abundance, who is the most dominant performer on the ball scene and who used to be Blanca’s house mother until their falling-out in the first season.

As we enter the second season, audiences in the show and at home are gaining more of an insight into a culture they may not have been familiar with. For Rodriguez, she sees this newfound fame and the responsibility of speaking for her community as both invigorating and intimidating.

“[It’s] invigorating in a way we get to be ourselves and live out loud. Intimidating because there are so many things that come our way. And with what we have to deal with and the responsibilities that we have, [it] can be a little overwhelming,” she explains. “Just making sure that we speak for our community in the right way and that we do the work that needs to be done that a lot of people out there aren’t doing. Whether through our craft or speaking on a platform that we need to be speaking on.”

The first season was very educational for those who may not understand the nuances of the trans community. For instance, Jackson’s character Elektra had decided to have a sex reassignment surgery, commonly known as a “bottom surgery” within the community, and ended up losing not only friends but the man she loved during her journey.

“Throughout the years, many people have had this misconception about being transgender and they have always come from their comfortability,” says Jackson, who has gone through this surgery, about what the show got right in this telling. “But we also have to realize that having gender-affirming surgeries, it is a personal journey. Every trans person’s journey ends in a certain place. My version of complete was bottom surgery. A lot of people just thought we did this surgery because it’s always about ‘getting a man’ or something like that. They never realize that we actually do lose men, lose friends when we decide to go that route. Because they’re not fantasizing about us being our version of complete with bottom surgery. They’re fantasizing about us being in this form with ‘extra,’ as they would put it.”

> “[It’s] invigorating in a way we get to be ourselves and live out loud. Intimidating because there are so many things that come our way. And with what we have to deal with and the responsibilities that we have, [it] can be a little overwhelming.”
> MJ Rodriguez

The show has put many of these actresses and creative people behind the scenes who happen to be trans in great positions of visibility, and Jackson is proud to see that the industry is changing around the show’s success.

“I’ve seen more people actually take us more seriously and actually hiring us,” she says. “Not just placing us into this box or category that we’re only one thing and we can only play that one character. Now, we’re writers, we’re directors, we’re actresses. We’re out here actually showing the talents that we have. We’re showing that we can do the work. I think that’s the best part about it.”

After a life of performing in the ballroom scene, Jackson is just happy to see her world be in the spotlight where it belongs.

“My favorite part is to see all of the extras and all of the people I’ve known in ballrooms over the years, now seeing them have the opportunity,” says Jackson. “When you would go into ballroom, you would really think that it was a night at the Oscars, because we put our best foot forward. It was our place to be fantastic and elegant and live that dream.”

Arnold Schwarzenegger plays T-800 Model 101. CONTRIBUTED

Metro visited the set of "Terminator: Dark Fate," the upcoming science-fiction-action film directed by Tim Miller, set to be released Nov. 1.

letters@metro.us

To be honest, this set visit happened back in September 2018, however 20th Century Fox has imposed a lengthy embargo on the publication of any material related to the movie, making it clear that the production of "Terminator: Dark Fate" is being carried out in strict secrecy.

Immediately upon arrival, representatives of the film studio warn that they will not reveal any details about the plot. The only thing we are told is that the action of the new film will take place in the near future, immediately after the events of "Terminator 2." And American actress Linda Hamilton will star in the movie, returning to the role of Sarah Connor after an almost 30-year break. And, of course, Arnold Schwarzenegger will appear as T-800 Model 101.

The first place we visit is a giant hangar in the suburbs of Budapest. In the middle of it is a huge military aircraft — well, its "body," without a tail.

As the crew members explain, a significant number of action scenes will be shot inside this aircraft, thus its elaboration is pretty painstaking. To demonstrate this, we are let inside the structure, which looks absolutely realistic. The floor and walls are sheathed with metal, there are some wires twisting, and benches for passengers are installed around the perimeter. Seeing our curiosity, we are asked to touch the scenery. Imagine our surprise when it turns out that everything on the plane, from the walls to the inconspicuous nail in the casing, is soft and elastic, like rubber.

"The actors here will fight and fall, so everything should be as safe as possible," a representative of the prop department explains.

Next to the plane, there is something like a powerful, sand-colored armored van. We rush to touch it as well, and this "giant" also turns out to be soft.

The second and most exciting part of the visit to the film set becomes the Origo Studios, where all the main actors were to be filmed on the day of our arrival.

Filming takes place in the pavilion, which has been turned into a space station or science lab from the future. There are control panels everywhere, some incomprehensible instruments, blue lights…

At the signal of director Tim Miller, Linda Hamilton appears in front of the cameras in a bulletproof vest and with a gun in her hands, followed by Mackenzie Davis and Natalia Reis. An armed Arnold Schwarzenegger appears right after, clearly in great shape and looking much younger than

The world is expecting a continuation of the legendary 'Terminator'

Linda Hamilton plays Sarah Connor. CONTRIBUTED

71. The characters, apparently, are trying to get away from the chase. They look around and quickly disappear from the frame. The actors repeat the scene several times, after which the director gives instructions to shift the light.

"It's great to come back and find out what happened to Sarah Connor after so many years," Linda Hamilton confesses during the break. "Before, I [had] always refused to play in the sequels to 'Terminator.' But [James] Cameron persuaded me. It is interesting to see what I am still capable of. And, of course, it was great to get back to the same site with Arnold. We work very well together."

As the 62-year-old actress admits, physical training before shooting was exhausting.

"We had intensive training in Texas. Sometimes it was really hard. But we endured," she recalls.

Judging by Miller's comments, the actress' suffering will be rewarded, because it is her character who will be in the middle of the action this time.

"For me, this movie is, first of all, about the story of Sarah," says the director. "This strong character deserves decent development."

At the same time, Miller notes that the new "Terminator" will not become an anthem of feminism. He wants to make a movie in the style of the first two parts of the project.

"I'm a fan of Cameron's films," he tells the press in attendance. "And I still don't quite believe that I'm shooting 'Terminator.'"

USWNT starts World Cup campaign today vs. Thailand

The defending champs take on Thailand to open Group F play.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The U.S. women's national team opens up World Cup play today vs. Thailand. GETTY IMAGES

The wait is over for the United States Women's National Team as they open their 2019 FIFA Women's World Cup campaign this afternoon (3 p.m. ET, FOX).

The first challenge for the reigning World Cup champions is Thailand, minnows of the women's soccer world making just their second-ever appearance at the Women's World Cup.

All signs point to an easier victory for the United States, though this year's tournament has already provided a bit of a shock when Italy upset Australia on Sunday.

Regardless, the Americans are the No. 1-ranked team in the world and have high hopes this summer in France.

Manager Jill Ellis will have plenty of things to iron out within her side, though that is usually what happens within a loaded roster.

Here are a few things to watch for as the U.S. starts things up today.

THE DEFENSE

Among the biggest questions is, what will she do with her back line? The United States defense has proven to be shaky against some of the stronger sides in the world, especially against the counter-attack.

Sweden exposed that problem back in the 2016 Olympics and provided a blueprint for the rest of the world for how to break down the Americans.

Considering Thailand is one of the weaker sides in the tournament, it's the perfect opportunity to tune things up in France for Ellis and her defense.

The experienced Becky Sauerbrunn will be looked on to lead what could be a rather inexperienced back line. Abby Dahlkemper and Crystal Dunn are making their first World Cup appearances, with Dunn moving from forward to wing back. Kelley O'Hara was used sparingly at the 2015 World Cup as well.

It makes Ellis' decision on what to do with Julie Ertz that much more important.

Ertz had been a stalwart at center back for the national team, including at the 2015 World Cup, but has since been moved to a holding midfield role.

If Dahlkemper encounters any trouble alongside Sauerbrunn at center back, look for Ellis to move Ertz back to her original position.

CARLI LLOYD AND THE CHIP ON HER SHOULDER

One of the greatest goal scorers in the history of the U.S. national team is likely entering her final World Cup and, at 37 years old, Carli Lloyd could be spending her time in France as a reserve forward.

The United States is stacked up front with goal-scoring and playmaking talent, whether it's in the form of Alex Morgan, Tobin Heath or newcomer Mallory Pugh, who is slated to be the next big star in women's soccer.

Yet Lloyd is not simply going to accept her role as a substitute. No, the New Jersey native, who ranks fourth in program history with 110 international goals, has continued to produce, scoring five goals in her last three matches with the USWNT.

"I'm ready to go and it's going to be a decision for the coaching staff to play me," Lloyd said. "Life throws different challenges at you. I've had a different challenge and a different story line and a different journey going into every major tournament. It's not where you start, it's where you finish."

Kyrie Irving to the Nets continues to pick up steam. GETTY IMAGES

Nets continue to make right moves

Brooklyn poised to pick up two big starts this summer.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Brooklyn Nets are forcing their way into the conversation as major players on the free-agent market this summer.

Once expected to play second fiddle to the New York Knicks come July 1 when free agency begins, the Nets continue to make all the right moves in their pursuit of one or more superstars.

On Thursday, Brooklyn traded Allan Crabbe to the Atlanta Hawks and received Taurean Prince in return; importantly, they got the guard's $18.5 million off the books.

That currently leaves the Nets with approximately $46 million in cap space for a summer spending spree, which would be enough for two max-salary contracts.

As it stands, the Nets look to be on the verge of couping superstar point guard Kyrie Irving should he decide to leave the Boston Celtics.

Vegas has them tabbed as the favorites to land him and sources have told Anthony Puccio of the Daily News that the Nets are "front-runners" for the 27-year-old.

Irving grew up in New Jersey as a Nets fan and idolized Jason Kidd during the franchise's more successful periods in the early 2000s.

There is a possibility of the Nets pairing up Irving with D'Angelo Russell in the Nets' backcourt even though the two play a similar style.

At just 23 years old, Russell is coming off the finest season of his career, garnering his first-ever All-Star appearance after posting 21.1 points and seven assists per game.

As a restricted free agent, though, Russell's big year throws a wrench into the Nets' plans.

If GM Sean Marks opts to renounce Russell rather than retain him, the Nets will have those two max-salary slots to use this summer. Should they retain or extend Russell, it becomes just one.

Given Brooklyn's standing as favorites to sign Irving, there suddenly is a chance to make a serious run at Golden State Warriors playmaker Kevin Durant.

The 10-time All-Star has been linked with the crosstown-rival Knicks for the better part of the last year, considered as a future savior of a franchise that has done nothing for two decades.

However, the Nets are a team coming off a playoff appearance in the weaker Eastern Conference. Adding Irving could make them a far more attractive landing spot compared to the Knicks for Durant.

Taking such a course of action would be a hard turn away from the Nets' values during their rebuild. This was a franchise that went from basement dweller to playoffs in the East by developing its young players.

But you can't develop an Irving or Durant too often, which would immediately make the Nets a title contender.
